

SECURING ARIZONA'S WATER FUTURE

The Drought Contingency Plan is a historic agreement between seven Southwestern states and Mexico that will help secure our water future.

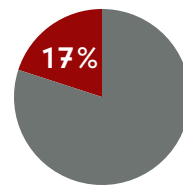

JANUARY

31

The federal government set a deadline of January 31 to pass the Drought Contingency Plan.

A 19-year drought threatens water levels in Lake Mead.

Without action, Arizona could lose up to 17% of our water allocation – enough for 1 million households.

DROUGHT CONTINGENCY PLAN BY THE NUMBERS

40 stakeholders from across Arizona came together to develop a plan to save water.

The Drought Contingency Plan balances our water reductions to help secure Arizona's water future.
